

Psychopathology

Jeffrey J. Wolynski

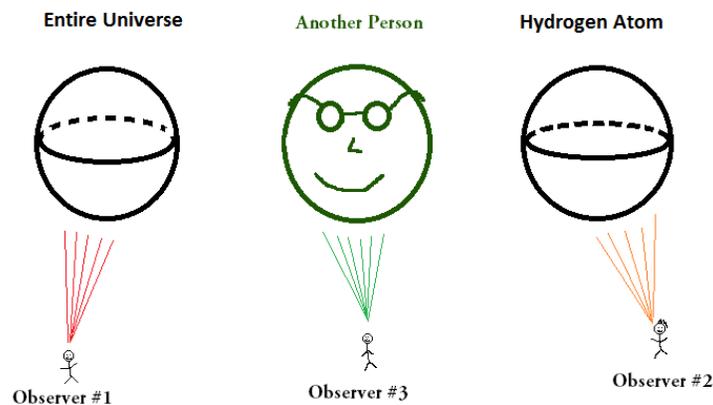

January 2, 2013

Jeffrey.wolynski@yahoo.com

Abstract: It is hypothesized an actual understanding of humans as they are mostly psychopathic and delusional.

A simple diagram that illustrates why the vast majority of humans are psychopathic, meaning they are detached from reality.

June 13, 2012 -Jeffrey W.

All three perspectives are quite literally impossible, because they ALL rely on the incorrect perception that the universe is outside of them.

The entire atom/matter theory and big bang theory is rooted in the fact that the majority of humans are psychopaths. This is why the sciences have stalled, not because they cannot find some “god particle”. Psychopathology is much more prevalent than is socially accepted regardless if it is a fact of nature and a phenomenon of perception. The vast majority of humanity still believes reality is outside of them. This is observed in religions such as Big Bang, the Atom religion, Christianity and others. Therefore it should be understood that the vast majority of humans are psychopathic to a certain extent.

An easy way to test for psychopathology would be to simply ask if the patient perceives reality to be outside of them, i.e. if they believe in God or the big bang. As it is known to the author the easiest way to understand psychopathology is to first recognize it. Psychopathology is a perceptual phenomenon, a psychological attribute that will atrophy via evolution. Psychopathic races are, by default, in a perpetual state of self-quarantine from interstellar exploration outside of their home star systems because of their failure to see how the universe is connected (being detached from reality/ psychopathic).