

On the importance of through spell-checking in short text based communication

Anton Nikitin

December 28, 2017

Abstract

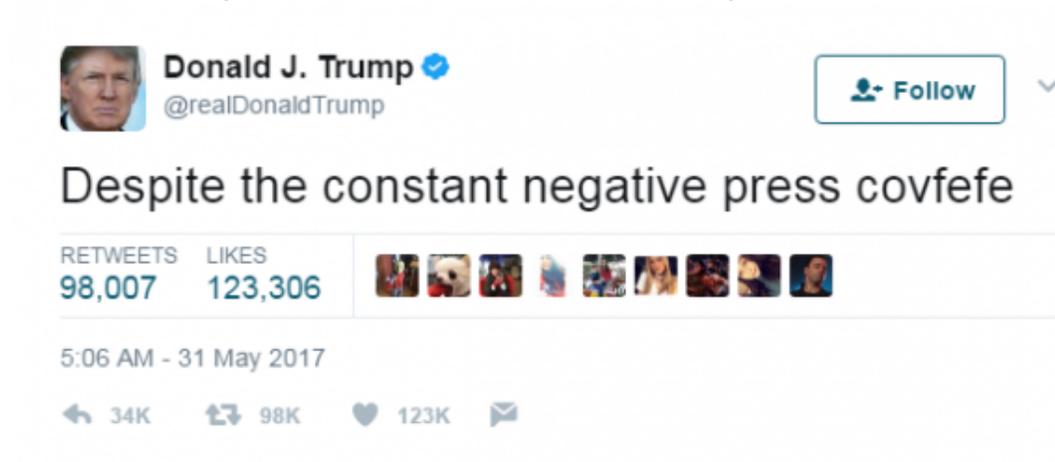

Correct spelling is key in human communication as it ensures messages are transmitted with the correct meaning and without ambiguity. Twitter as a social platform has been invaluable in allowing many users to reach out to the wider internet community in order to allow them to gain deeper insights into their lives, this means it is more critical than ever to ensure these messages are communicated in a syntactically correct way. This paper critically analyses why this is required and the consequences when it goes wrong.

Acknowledgements

The author would like to thank his cats, dogs and ponies who have provided moral support along the way in producing this paper.

1 Introduction

Figure 1: A well known example of misspelling

2 Conclusion

'nuff said.